

The UCSC Education Department presents:

Diversity, Equity, and Access: Promoting Social Justice in Education

Diversity, Equity, and Access: Promoting Social Justice in Education

This presentation, based on the testimonios of a teacher educator, will explore the cultural, political, and academic aims associated with promoting social justice in education.

Francisco Rios, Ph.D.

Dean of the Woodring College of Education
Western Washington University

Wednesday, February 15th, 2017

11:30pm – 12:30pm

McHenry 0266 (Ground Floor)

Getting here: Turn left after the walking bridge. Use the entry down the stairway near the picnic tables. You can also take the elevator from the first floor.

There will be a Brown Bag Lunch with Dr. Rios after the talk.

Dr. Rios' research interests include teachers of color, Latinos in education, and pre-service teacher education with a multicultural focus. He was the Senior Associate Editor of Multicultural Perspectives, the journal of the National Association for Multicultural Education and served as the founding director of the University of Wyoming's Social Justice Research Center. In 2008, he received the Distinguished Scholar Mid-Career Award, from the Committee of Scholars of Color in Education from AERA. He is the president elect of the National Association for Multicultural Education.